Many of us are sons or daughters of WWII veterans, but know little about our parents role in the great fight to maintain freedom around the world. My father, Walter Duncan, was in the 103rd Infantry Division, Reconnaissance Division, through the end of the war and the break up of the 103rd Infantry. He was thus able to obtain a book of the full history of the 103rd, a history full of little known facts, superb field drawings of the war, and great photos of the 103rd in action. The book is entitled, "Report after Action, The Story of the 103rd Infantry Division.". I have digitalized the cover and every page of this book. Following are a few low-res photos of these scans. I hope to soon complete a means of providing a digital copy of the book for purchase. If you are interested in this project email me at the provided link.
